

RADIO TV REPORTS, INC.

4701 WILLARD AVENUE, CHEVY CHASE, MARYLAND 20815 (301) 656-4068

---

FOR PUBLIC AFFAIRS STAFF

PROGRAM All Things Considered

STATION WAMU-FM
NPR Network

DATE May 30, 1986 6:45 PM

CITY Washington, DC

SUBJECT The CIA's Edward Howard

NINA TOTENBERG: Last year, Vitaly Yurchenko, the Soviet agent who defected to the United States and later returned to the Soviet Union, exposed former CIA agent Edward Howard.

Howard had been fired by the CIA and then allegedly sold secrets to the Soviets.

Edward Howard disappeared from his home in Santa Fe last fall while the FBI sat outside his home. Agents had agreed to give Howard two days to get his affairs in order in exchange for his promise to cooperate.

Washington Post reporter Walter Pincus has been following the story. We asked him to go back and outline Howard's role in the CIA.

~~WALTER PINCUS:~~ The job, first, was to be the person who made contact with the undercover agents that the United States had in Moscow. And just the techniques of making contact in a city in which most Americans, certainly diplomats, are followed. We worked out these kind of techniques -- how you leave messages, how you contact people, how you drop things off. These were techniques, I'm told, that have been developed over years and will now have to be totally redone.

TOTENBERG: Now, we knew quite candidly that Howard had bamboozled the FBI because at the time of his arrest he flew the coop. How did he do it?

PINCUS: First of all, you have to understand that both he and his wife had been trained by the CIA in what's known as counter-surveillance, and counter-surveillance is the ability to realize you're being followed and the ability once you realize it to avoid being followed. And on this

1/extra copy below

RADIO TV REPORTS, INC.

4701 WILLARD AVENUE, CHEVY CHASE, MARYLAND 20815 (301) 656-4068

---

FOR PUBLIC AFFAIRS STAFF

PROGRAM All Things Considered STATION WAMU-FM
NPR Network

DATE May 30, 1986 6:45 PM CITY Washington, DC

SUBJECT The CIA's Edward Howard

NINA TOTENBERG: Last year, Vitaly Yurchenko, the Soviet agent who defected to the United States and later returned to the Soviet Union, exposed former CIA agent Edward Howard.

Howard had been fired by the CIA and then allegedly sold secrets to the Soviets.

Edward Howard disappeared from his home in Santa Fe last fall while the FBI sat outside his home. Agents had agreed to give Howard two days to get his affairs in order in exchange for his promise to cooperate.

 Washington Post reporter Walter Pincus has been following the story. We asked him to go back and outline Howard's role in the CIA.

WALTER PINCUS: The job, first, was to be the person who made contact with the undercover agents that the United States had in Moscow. And just the techniques of making contact in a city in which most Americans, certainly diplomats, are followed. We worked out these kind of techniques -- how you leave messages, how you contact people, how you drop things off. These were techniques, I'm told, that have been developed over years and will now have to be totally redone.

TOTENBERG: Now, we knew quite candidly that Howard had bamboozled the FBI because at the time of his arrest he flew the coop. How did he do it?

PINCUS: First of all, you have to understand that both he and his wife had been trained by the CIA in what's known as counter-surveillance, and counter-surveillance is the ability to realize you're being followed and the ability once you realize it to avoid being followed. And on this